HISTORY: Founded in 1999, Inovestor initially provided financial information to the media. The product and brand then evolved to include an automated security selection and portfolio monitoring system for Canadian investors. A series of acquisitions in the financial data industry, beginning in 2004, enabled the firm to purchase Stock Guide from Toronto, and StockPointer in 2011, to establish itself in the analytical software industry. Today, StockPointer generates reports on more than 7,500 North American companies.¹ In 2017, Inovestor launched its own ETF in partnership with Horizons called the Inovestor Canadian Equity Index ETF (INOC).²
